My recent Erasmus+ teaching mobility experience in Riga, Latvia, was a highly rewarding professional and personal experience. During my visit, I had the opportunity to deliver lectures on Arduino Programming at Alberta College, where I shared my knowledge and practical experience with Latvian students. It was particularly interesting and inspiring to observe their engagement and curiosity, as my lectures were met with genuine interest and active participation.

The students demonstrated a strong motivation to explore Arduino programming in depth. They showed particular enthusiasm for understanding both the theoretical foundations and the practical applications of Arduino-based systems. As a result, the lectures were highly productive and interactive, fostering meaningful discussions and hands-on learning experiences.

A special moment of this mobility was meeting one of my students, Anna Chkuaseli, who is Georgian on her father's side and Latvian on her mother's side. This encounter created a unique emotional connection and symbolized the cultural and educational bridges that Erasmus+ programs successfully build between countries and people.

I would like to express my sincere gratitude to the Erasmus+ coordinator at Alberta College, Veronika Beluza, for her excellent organization and support throughout my visit. I am also thankful to Jurijs Radionovs, IT Programme Director at Alberta College, for his professionalism, cooperation, and openness to academic exchange. Their support contributed greatly to the success of my teaching mobility.

This Erasmus+ experience in Riga not only enriched my teaching practice but also strengthened international academic cooperation. I return with positive impressions, valuable pedagogical insights, and warm memories of Latvia.

This mobility has further reinforced my belief in the importance of international education and collaboration, and I would gladly welcome future opportunities to continue this fruitful partnership.
